An intensive technical specialization program trained and certified 122 collaborators as Qualified Applicators and Technicians in safety and responsible use of agricultural pesticides. The initiative reduces environmental risk, protects biodiversity, and ensures field operations prioritize planet health and community safety.

Prosperity

Industria Chiquibul reaffirms its commitment to nurturing local talent. As part of an academic exchange, the company welcomed 42 students and two professors from the Regional University of Guatemala. The visit offered future professionals an inside look at industrial processes and the sustainability standards that guide operations. By opening our doors we seek to inspire next generations, creating opportunities to connect university theory with real-world business practice.

In partnership with the Order of Malta, we delivered essential support to local communities. Through this collaboration, the team facilitated medical supplies in Samaria, transforming the community hall into a temporary center where families accessed vital medicines and basic care items, strengthening well-being and quality of life. We are looking forward to continuing using this Alliance to bring a positive impact in other areas in the region.

People

At Industria Chiquibul, we finished the training of the first group of women from the School of Operators, held in partnership with INTECAP. 32 women from nearby communities completed their training in tractor operation and modules on human rights, gender empowerment, and assertive operational skills. This milestone opens new employment pathways and strengthens social inclusion. We will continue to expand this program, offering advanced training, and connecting graduates with job opportunities.
