This month, Industria Chiquibul welcomed Earthworm Foundation for a comprehensive review of our operations. Their visit was designed not only to assess compliance with international standards, but also to strengthen our shared commitment to people, communities, and the environment.

EF consultants visited our medical clinics to ensure quality health services, interviewed staff across laboratories, central processing plant, and agricultural areas, and engaged with nearby communities to confirm respect for human and labor rights. Their evaluation highlighted the proper use of Personal Protective Equipment (PPE), effective grievances and queries mechanisms, and fair working hours—all contributing to a safe and respectful workplace.

This collaborative visit reaffirmed our dedication to transparency and continuous improvement, helping us identify opportunities to further strengthen our standards and enhance employee and community well-being.

People

Industria Chiquibul carried out two key training programs this month to strengthen safety and professional development. First, a practical workshop on safe work at heights reinforced the correct use of harnesses, anchoring systems, and lifelines, along with preventive equipment inspections and safety protocols to minimize risks in daily operations.

Also, in coordination with INTECAP, specialized training was provided to female employees on tractor operation, combining theory and practice to ensure technical proficiency and safe maneuvering in agricultural tasks. Together, these initiatives highlight our commitment to employee well-being, equal opportunities, and the highest standards of industrial safety.
