Transparency and Sustainability in Wastewater Treatment Plant

During this month, at Industria Chiquibul, we strengthened our commitment to transparency by welcoming community leaders from Quimalá and Tierra Blanca 5000 at our wastewater treatment plant. With this program we aim to create an open space to share how we protect local water resources through modern technology and strict environmental controls, and give communities firsthand insight into our sustainable practices.

We continued investing in regional technical growth by welcoming Agronomy Growing Engineering students from Universidad Rural de Cobán. During a full day of field learning, we gave students a hands-on learning experience where they explored innovative practices shaping the future of sustainable palm extraction.

Prosperity

As part of our ongoing commitment to due diligence and respect for fundamental rights, an important institutional meeting was held between the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) and Industria Chiquibul, with the goal of exploring a long-term strategic alliance and opportunities.

The meeting focused on strengthening human rights promotion, sustainability practices, grievance mechanisms, and legal compliance across our operations, as well as future opportunities for joint work.

People and Wellbeing

Our dedication to dignified working conditions reached a new milestone with the completion of the second module of our Tierra Blanca housing camp. This new facility expands capacity by 200 workers and ensures high-quality food service, accommodations, and access to essential services that support. This incentive is part of our room and board program reflects our promise to provide safe, sustainable and dignified spaces for every collaborator.
